Section Title: Benefits Administration - Wage Loss
Subject: Special Additional Compensation
Effective Date: At the first review conducted on or after January 1, 2001. Changes are effective from the date of review.

POLICY PURPOSE

When the monthly pension paid to a worker for the physical loss (permanent impairment) resulting from an accident does not adequately compensate the worker for the loss of earning capacity caused by the injury, the WCB may also pay Special Additional Compensation (SAC).

This policy describes when SAC will be paid, for how long, and in what amount. It only applies to accidents that occurred before January 1, 1992.

A. POLICY

1. Definition

Maximal Earning Capacity Date is the later of:

- (i) the date the worker has completed any vocational rehabilitation training provided (including any training on the job, apprenticeship training provided by the employer, and job search) and will be offered no significant additional employment-related services, and
- (ii) the date the injury has stabilized to the point where a permanent partial disability award has been established.

2. Entitlement

Special Additional Compensation (SAC) will be provided under the following circumstances:

- a) The worker is given a permanent partial disability (impairment) award under section 40(1) or a "Functional Impairment Award" under policy 43.10.30, Functional Impairment Awards. The permanent partial disability award must be established after December 31, 1966, for this policy to apply.
- b) The worker has a loss of earning capacity that is greater than the amount of the permanent partial disability award.
- c) The worker makes a fair and honest effort at vocational rehabilitation.
- d) Vocational rehabilitation assistance was provided but has not produced an earning capacity that is reasonably equivalent to the pre-accident earning capacity; and,
- e) The worker is not retired when SAC is considered.

3. Duration of Entitlement

When the worker continues to meet the entitlement criteria, SAC will continue until the worker's anticipated retirement date as defined in Policies 44.60.20, Date of Retirement and 44.60.20.01, Date of Retirement.

4. The Amount of SAC benefit

The SAC benefit will be calculated by:

- First, determining the worker's pre-accident earnings. The determination of the pre-accident earnings will be consistent with Policy 44.80.10.10, Average Earnings.
- Then deducting the worker's post-accident earning capacity to establish the loss of earning capacity. The determination of the loss of earning capacity will be consistent with Policies 44.80.30.10, Establishing Post-Accident Earning Capacity, 44.80.30.20, Post-Accident Earnings - Deemed Earning Capacity and 44.80.80.10, Wage Loss Benefits – Temporary Partial Disability.
- Then multiplying the loss of earning capacity by 75% to establish the worker's entitlement. When the worker's pre-accident earnings are above the maximum covered earnings, the worker's entitlement will be derived using the formula set out in subsection 44(2) of The Workers Compensation Act as it existed prior to January 1, 1992.
- Then, deducting the current pension value of the permanent partial disability award that the worker received as a result of the same injury for which SAC is being awarded, regardless of whether it has been commuted, unless the pension was commuted prior to January 1, 1992. Then, the value of the pension at the time of the commutation will be used.

An example of how SAC might be calculated is presented in Schedule "A".

5. Reviews of the SAC Benefit

Under The Workers Compensation Act, the SAC benefit is indexed in July of every second year. Annual reviews are generally completed on the anniversary date of the establishment of the SAC rather than the indexing date. Reviews for workers receiving SAC will be consistent with the purpose and principles of Policy 44.80.80.20, Loss of Earning Capacity Reviews. When the WCB believes that the worker's situation is stable and will remain stable in the future, the WCB may decide not to conduct further annual reviews.

6. SAC Benefits after retirement

When a worker belongs to a registered retirement pension plan as defined in The Pension Benefits Act or applicable federal pension legislation at the time of the accident; and, the worker's entitlement to that pension has been negatively affected by the accident that prompted the payment of SAC, the WCB will provide benefits after the worker's retirement date.

These additional benefits will be based on 2% of the monthly SAC being paid at the time of the retirement date. This amount will be multiplied by the number of years between the time that the WCB determines that the worker has reached maximal earning capacity and the time that the worker retired. This additional benefit will be paid for the life of the worker.

C. ADMINISTRATIVE GUIDELINES

Retirement Pensions

A “registered retirement pension plan” as defined in The Pension Benefits Act or applicable federal pension legislation includes a retirement pension provided through the worker’s employer or union. It does not include a CPP retirement pension or a RRSP pension (paid for by the worker for him or herself).

SCHEDULE “A” SAMPLE CALCULATION OF SAC

Description	Example
Step 1: Average earnings determined at time of initial SAC calculation	Joan Smith’s pre-accident job pays $10.00/hour at 40 hours per week $400 \times 4.333 = $1,733.20$ per month
Step 2: Average earnings are reduced by post-accident earnings (e.g., actual income) to determine the “loss of earning capacity	Joan Smith’s post-accident job pays $8.00/hour at 40 hours per week $320 \times 4.333 = $1,386.56$ per month $$1,733.20 - $1,386.56 = $346.64$ per month
Step 3: The loss of earning capacity is multiplied by 75% to get the benefit before PPD	Joan Smith’s loss of earning capacity is $346.64 per month $346.64 \times 75\% = $259.98$ per month
Step 4: The amount arrived at in step 3 is reduced by the amount of the permanent partial disability award (PPD) and the result is the SAC payment	Joan Smith’s PPD is $50 per month $259.98 - $50 = \209.98 per month $209.98 is the monthly SAC payment

Note: This example calculation does not require consideration of the maximum/minimum insurable earnings. Application of the maximum/minimum may be required in some cases.
