

PRODUCTION COMPANIES

Are production companies required to purchase WCB coverage?

Production companies are required to purchase coverage for all workers except entertainers. Entertainers include actors, stunt people and any other person who works in front of the camera. Entertainers are not required to have workers compensation coverage; however, the WCB sells coverage for these individuals.

Are all persons, other than entertainers, working on a production considered workers?

No. The term "worker" is similar to the term "employee" and some people working in the industry are independent contractors, rather than workers. In order to determine the status of a particular individual, the WCB may need to review such factors as the collective agreement, the contract of employment, the amount and type of compensation paid, and whether or not rights and royalties are being paid, etc.

Can a production company provide coverage for everyone associated with the production?

Yes, production companies may choose to cover all individuals associated with the production, including actors, entertainers, directors, and writers, etc. In some circumstances, these individuals may be considered independent contractors. To ensure independent contractors have coverage, the production company must request coverage at the time of registration and each individual who is an independent contractor must complete an application for coverage.

The completed applications do not need to be provided to the WCB at the time coverage is purchased, but should be retained by the production company so they can be provided to the WCB in the event that a claim is filed.

Are individuals with optional coverage - including independent contractors and the production company - protected by the immunity from lawsuit provisions of The Workers Compensation Act?

Yes. If the production company elects to cover all individuals associated with the production and can produce a completed application form for the individual(s) involved following a work-related injury or illness, both the production company and the individual with optional coverage will be immune from potential lawsuits from each other and all other covered employers and workers.

What payroll is considered assessable?

Payroll up to $502,200 (annualized) per individual in 2019 is considered assessable.

What do I do if someone working on the production experiences a workplace injury?

As soon as you are informed of the injury, report the claim to the Workers Compensation Board. If the value of the injured individual's contract exceeds $502,200 in 2019, the WCB will determine if the individual is a worker or an independent contractor and, if applicable, a copy of the application and other documentation may be required.

If the injury and resulting loss of income continue beyond the duration of the contract, wage loss benefits will be calculated according to the WCB's Average Earnings policy and paid up to the maximum optional coverage level of $502,200 (annualized). Verification of earnings will be required to pay ongoing wage loss benefits.
